After all the sold concerts on his first world tour –New York, Los Angeles, Paris, London, Vienna, Berlin, and Tokyo- and his debut concerts in Madrid and Barcelona, the Canadian pianist and composer Tony Ann is coming to the Cervantes Theatre with the best pieces of his chromatic trilogy Emotionally (Blue, Orange, Red), as well as pop compositions and other unreleased songs.

This young virtuoso, a self-proclaimed connoisseur of harmony, merges new and old musical styles to achieve an overwhelming effect, always seeking to breach the limits not only of neoclassical and instrumental music, but of popular music as well.

Ann is an instrumentalist who uses the eighty-eight keys of his piano to his advantage with creations full of emotion, technique and diversity that push the boundaries of the neoclassical genre and invite the audience to a unique musical experience..

Having become a real phenomenon on social media, with more than six million followers on Instagram, Tik Tok and YouTube, one of his numerous achievements is having introduced younger generations to neoclassical ideas, in particular with his series #playthatword, in which after writing the alphabet on the keys of his piano, he creates original compositions based on words proposed by his audience.
